Waste Knights: Second Edition has been recently funded with a successful Kickstarter campaign, with over 4,400 backers. The game is set in a dystopian Australia half a century from now, inspired by cult movies and books of the genre enabling players to immerse themselves in a ruined world full of gangs, mutated creatures, sentient machines and – most of all – unforgettable stories.

Waste Knights is due to release in 2020, and UKGE attendees will have the chance to play it at Ares' booth.

Black Rose Wars designer, Marco Montanaro, will be at Ares' booth presenting his game, a big hit on Kickstarter in 2018 with $1,311,558 raised and 8,364 backers. In Black Rose Wars, powerful mages of the Black Rose Order strive to become the new Supreme Grand Master of the Lodge and acquire the mighty power of the Black Rose Artefact and of Forgotten Magic. One to four players will duel in a series of epic battles. Mages have at their disposal six schools of magic and can develop a unique strategy to annihilate their opponents and increase their power, using different and powerful spells.

The Kickstarter edition of the game features lots of components, added as stretch goals, and KS exclusives. Ares Games partnered with Ludus Magnus to publish the retail version of the game, due for release in 2020. At UK Games Expo, a limited quantity of the Kickstarter Edition will be available at Ares' booth.
